Today we're going to...

- Talk about how the ConnectedLib Toolkit was made and what's inside
- Review what Connected Learning is and how it can help your teen services
- Dip your toes into some of the Toolkit activities
- Think about your next steps with connected learning

How We Built the Toolkit

- Interviews with 90+ library workers
- Participatory design with ~15 library workers
- A second round of co-design with ~10 rural and small library staff

Connected Learning 101

Interests

Learning opportunities are aligned with teens' goals and motivations

Relationships

Teens build relationships by learning with and from other teens as well as adults

Opportunity

Building skills directed towards academic, civic, or economic achievement

Thinking About Your Library

1. Where are your library's STRENGTHS?

Are your teen services particularly strong in accommodating teen's interests? Do you help teens form strong relationships with each other or with community members? Tell us how by clicking the + button underneath the relevant learning sphere and posting a green note like this one!

Learning About Your Community

1. Think about your community

No matter how small or remote your community is, there are still assets for the library to work with! Think about individuals (that retired veterinarian?) and organizations (4-H?) and the strengths and resources they can bring to the table.

Creating a Roadmap

Timeframe	Goal	First Step(s)
In the next month I will...		<input type="checkbox"/>
In the next three months, I will...		<input type="checkbox"/>
In the next six months, I will...		<input type="checkbox"/>
In the next year, I will...		<input type="checkbox"/>

And back to self-reflection...

Share what you know, what you want to know, what you've learned, and what you'll do next. ⋮

Click the + button under each question to post a response. Feel free to add colors, links or images.
